

Let's evaluate this indefinite integral:

$$\int \cos^2(x) + \sin^2(x) dx$$

Using basic trigonometry we know that  $\cos^2(x) + \sin^2(x) = 1$  so our integral is simply  $x + C$  for some constant  $C$ .